EMMANUEL LAW FIRM ... Court sides with Kraser, kills impeachment trial

Justices say removal process was null and void two weeks after 2022 vote.

Pennsylvania's Supreme Court has ruled in favor of Kraser, likely ending the attempt to remove the progressive prosecutor from office.

The state House of Representatives impeached Kraser, a Democrat, in a party-line vote nearly two years ago. A trial in the Senate has been stalled since an appeals court issued a judgment indicating that the charges against him were not constitutional.

On Thursday, the justices ruled that the removal effort was "null and void" when the two-year legislative term ended in Harrisburg.

Under a principle known as "sine die," pending bills and other unresolved business cannot be carried over into the next session.

Typically, the process must restart the next legislative session. Lawmakers are not required to reintroduce the bills.

The commonwealth determined that impeachments are not around the "sine die" rule by re-adopting the articles in the years since they were taken over by Democrats and currently hold a slim majority in the House. It is important to note that the court did not answer if the allegations of misbehavior in office met the constitutional standard for impeachment and conviction for the same.

The justices did not charge with the most of the meaning of "sine die" into a legal debate over the heavily into the Commonwealth Court case. But they also did not overrule the lower court, which found that none of the seven articles of impeachable merit standard for a removal offense.

Those questions must be resolved by the Supreme Court, he added in a state. "The rule of law and the public's confidence in the judicial justice system requires it."

White House Rep. Martina For Northstar, introduced the Supreme Court decision and said in response to Philadelphia's decision, "All Philadelphiaans were denied a day in court to make their case."

The articles of impeachment claimed Kraser had caused sk
