DESCRIPTION

Two photographers. One street. One day. Both photographers moved north to south across the entire spine of Philadelphia, documenting the city in real time from two different vantage points. Every photograph contains the exact date, time, and location. The project collapses the distance between seeing → photographing → mapping → publishing → archiving No staged moments. No rearranged sequencing. Only movement through time and space. The photographs are geospatially mapped and can be explored through the digital archive by scanning the QR code or visiting flux.dantesisofo.com/projects/broad-street Philadelphia becomes both subject and timestamp.

WHAT IS FLUX

FLUX is an open-source chronological photography publishing system.

36 photographs become one complete numbered issue.

The system generates:

- PDF publication
- contact sheet
- metadata manifest
- printable issue
